Gone are the days where a backup line is sufficient. Businesses cannot handle extensive delays before their backup line kicks in and when the backup line is just a slow DSL line or a leased line from a completely different provider with completely different IP addresses, the situation does become difficult.

Vaioni have designed a unique service to Corporates who require fully resilient links in and out of their network with complete transparency, but with maximum uptime and with no loss of speed. We deliver leased line services from completely different Telco's into your network, which terminate at completely different PoPs, which then terminate at completely different datacentres, using different transit providers. With the help of some genius Cisco protocols and our rock solid backbone, we provide you with a fully resilient, active/active service, using the same IP range across both links.

Perfect for mission critical sites.
